Soil	This lot has very deep soils, with predominance of loam and clay texture. There is also sand, improving significantly the drainage. Smaller size stones are surrounded with gravel, and slightly carbonated; they appear below the 3.28 feet.
Growing Season	The period 2013/14 presented complex weather conditions since the beginning of the season. Spring began with very low temperatures and snowfalls in the plains. Late frost affected the yield of varieties like chardonnay and malbec. A heatwave in January and rains in February were highlighted as climate anomalies; in both cases they were above average. The months of February, March and April had a cool climate, with record temperature below the historical average, which allowed an homogeneous maturity of oenological parameters.

Secondary Fermentation	Native malolactic fermentation in barrel; 3 months to completion.

Tasting notes	A very elegant wine of great freshness and liveliness. Pale yellow, vibrant color with green tones and golden reflexes. On the nose we find a delicate floral bouquet with subtle notes of tropical fruit, green apple and an herbal accent. Its minerality outstands while this wine delights us with aromas of toasted bread, cocoa butter, white chocolate and vanilla. On the palate it is round, with an excellent concentration, remarkable acidity and good volume. It is unctuous and persistent, leading to a noticeable, pleasant finish.
